One Century Down, Many More to Go!

Saturday afternoon, the Section media team was able to sit down with Section Chief Andrew Sorenson and National Chief Alex Call, at the New Ordeal Luncheon. They talked about their thoughts on the weekend and our Order's future. Speaking about the Arrowmen attending the luncheon, Sorenson said that it "was a chance for new ordeals to kindle the flames inside them. He expressed his enthusiasm for the Saturday lunch to be opened up to more people, and thought that it was a great opportunity for new Arrowmen to meet their officers. Call's speech to those in attendance focused on the story of his own initial apathy to the OA, and how he was "able to find the spark to rekindle his flame", and that he hopes the same for anyone else in the same position. Assuaging the worries about the weather, he also mentioned that upon arriving Friday night and seeing how much spirit SR-7A has, he knew it was going to be a great weekend, regardless of the weather.
